Essential information

Nepal Entry Visa regulations

All foreign visitors except Indians nationals need a visa to enter Nepal. These are free (for 30 days) for South Asian Area Regional Cooperation (SAARC) countries: Pakistan, Bhutan, and Bangladesh. All other nationals have to pay. Tourist visas are issued upon arrival at Kathmandu airport and official land entry points. The lines can be long for the former, so you may prefer to obtain one in advance at a Nepalese embassy or consulate in your own country. Otherwise, have a passport-size photo at the ready. You can pay the visa fee in US dollars, euros, pounds sterling, or other major foreign currencies at the Airport. At land entry points, officials often charge US dollars or Nepalese rupees.

Don't stay more than a few days, and don't manipulate your visa. Tourists have been fined and even jailed for these minor infractions.

Insurance

Travel insurance is compulsory for all customers who wish to participate in Nepal's tourism activities. We recommend a comprehensive travel insurance package to all of our customers. The insurance should cover the cost of rescue and evacuation by helicopter at altitude for hikers at altitudes up to 6,000 meters. An inadequate protection tour is carried out to cover personal injury. Medical expenses, repatriation costs, and any illness are covered. Nepal Tour and trekking service P. Ltd ask each of our travelers to email the trusted copy of their travel insurance as soon as they book the trip with us. Your travel insurance should cover personal accidents, medical expenses, emergency repatriation, and personal liability. Adequate travel insurance not only guarantees you security when traveling with us but also offers you comprehensive coverage for anything that could go wrong.

A typical policy generally provides coverage of lost luggage, tickets, and, up to a specific limit, cash, as well as for the cancellation or restriction of your trip.

Review

Excellent Trip

Our tour was well-planned and organized, taking into account all of the logistics needed: car and driver; a local guide with a firm grasp of English, very knowledgeable. We were able to see the Beautiful place of Kathmandu and capture the moments on our camera. While there were many places to visit, a lot of walking, and plenty of stairs to climb, we never felt neither rushed nor tired. Even though it did start to drizzle at some point, the guide was able to keep us dry and well-informed about the different attractions we visited.

Fantastic Tour in Nepal

One of the main things that interested me about this agency was the reasonable cost and the fact that they were flexible in terms of time. When you only have a week of finding a tour can be quite tricky. I was slightly wary of before the booking was the lack of reviews on the trip advisor. As most people do, that trip advisor is great for getting a real idea of what a tour company is like. They currently have seventy-five outstanding reviews, and these people were not wrong. The service was excellent, and the service staff was very knowledgeable, friendly, and helpful. I'm hoping to Nepal once again in 2022.
